About

The toast of the Theater District is "The Imbible: A Spirited History of Drinking." Time Out New York billed the show as "remarkably compelling" when it played at the city's 2014 International Fringe Festival. Such acclaim helped bring the show to New World Stages, where it opened on February 17. "The Imbible" showcases the kaleidoscopic talents of Anthony Caporale, the show's writer and star—as well as an internationally recognized mixologist. He puts his knowledge base to song in this musical comedy as he retraces 10,000 years of alcoholic history. Along with Caporale's vocal stylings and comedic chops, audiences enjoy three complimentary cocktails as they laugh and learn. Playing four nights a week, and now with a new "Day Drinking" brunch version of the show complete with a do-it-yourself Bloody Mary bar, every "Imbible" performance is buzzworthy in the truest sense of the word.
